ebrary Launches Affordable New Subscription E-book Database for Community Colleges

New product offers simultaneous, multi-user access to more than 18,000 titles

February 19, 2008 – Palo Alto, CA – ebrary®, a leading provider of e-content services and technology, today announced the availability of a new subscription database of e-books and other authoritative materials designed specifically for community colleges. With a growing selection of more than 18,000 titles, the affordable collection covers subject areas such as Nursing and Allied Health, Computer Technologies, Business, Law Enforcement, Criminal Law, and Criminology. Contributing publishers include AMACOM, Cambridge University Press, John Wiley & Sons, and The McGraw-Hill Companies.

ebrary's new collection for community colleges will continue to grow at no additional cost throughout the subscription term and is available under a simultaneous, multi-user access model. Additionally, the new product includes powerful features for conducting research quickly and efficiently including ebrary InfoTools™, which provides contextual searching across multiple online resources, multiple search options, personal bookshelves, highlighting, annotating, and automatic citations.

“We are extremely pleased to offer a new subscription database that addresses the specific content needs and budgets requirements of the community college library market,” said Leslie Lees, Vice President of Strategic Market Development. “We hope that the new product helps students be more productive and knowledgeable, while at the same time provides new revenue channels for our publishing partners.”

Pricing and Availability

ebrary's Community College Collection is available today. Through March 2008, ebrary is offering a 25% discount on the Community College Collection and all academic subscription products.
