Taylor & Francis Makes 1,000 New E-books Available for Purchase through ebrary, Offers 50% off Select Titles through January

December 12, 2007 – Oxfordshire, UK– Taylor & Francis today announced that more than 1,000 new titles are now available for purchase individually through ebrary. Taylor & Francis has been an ebrary publishing partner since 2001, and ebrary currently offers more than 18,500 Taylor & Francis, CRC Press, and Routledge titles under its purchase model.

Additionally, through January 31, 2008, Taylor & Francis is offering libraries a 50% discount (no minimum purchase required) on approximately 2,000 titles that were recently migrated from ebrary’s subscription databases and are now included in the full inventory of titles available for outright perpetual purchase. During the migration, ebrary added more than 2,500 e-books to its subscription collections from other leading publishers. Please contact sales@ebrary.com for further details.

“The basis of selection for titles in aggregated databases can and does change occasionally from time to time. This recent change has been the first and only change to-date in a partnership spanning more than six years with ebrary. We would like to stress that no T&F e-book titles have at any stage been withdrawn from sale and that the current 50% discount offer on those titles migrated from the subscription database provides an excellent acquisition opportunity for our customers. As a longstanding ebrary publishing partner we remain committed to providing ebrary with the authoritative content their customers and end-users require,” said Christoph Chesher, Group Sales Director for Taylor & Francis Group.

“ebrary is pleased to offer our customers such a wide selection of titles from Taylor & Francis, as it is one of the most esteemed international publishers and its content greatly enhances our e-book offerings,” said Leslie Lees, Vice President of Content Development for ebrary. “Taylor & Francis is among our very first publishing partners, and we are very pleased to have established such a strong relationship over the years.”
