ebrary Titles Now Available through Baker & Taylor's Title Source 3

College, public and school libraries can now more easily purchase e-books from ebrary within their existing print acquisition workflow

January 20, 2012 – Palo Alto, CA, USA – To make it easier and more efficient for libraries to acquire e-books from trusted publishers, ebrary®, a ProQuest business and leading provider of e-books and research technology, today announced that a selection of more than 268,000 e-books is now integrated with Title Source™ 3, Baker & Taylor's ordering platform used by academic, school and public libraries worldwide.

Tens of thousands of librarians who order books through Title Source 3 now have the option of choosing digital versions on the ebrary platform, which provides both online and offline access, with or without a new dedicated mobile app for the iPad®, iPhone® and iPad touch®. For details about ebrary's free new app, which is now available on the App StoreSM, read today's announcement at www.ebrary.com.

"We are excited to offer ebrary's wide selection of titles to the variety of markets that we serve," said George Coe, Baker & Taylor's President of Library & Education division. "In addition to ebrary's authoritative content from respected publishers, our community and career college, school, and public library customers will also benefit from ebrary's technology, which makes it easy to do research, both on-and off-line."

"Serving the needs of our library customers is our top priority, and Baker & Taylor has helped us do this through our integration with YBP and now Title Source 3," said Kevin Sayar, ebrary's President and General Manager. "We look forward to building on our relationship with Baker & Taylor, and further integrating our e-books and research technology with its industry-renowned services to bring value to all library markets."
